FILTH breeds foul diseases. What Egypt needs is not more doctors but a good scrubbing.

GEN. NUCKOLS mustered into service another company of militia yesterday at Henderson. This makes nineteen companies in all in the State. Only one more company will be allowed by a law of the State.

CHOLERA may make the tour of Europe this summer, but there is little danger that its travels will be extended to the United States. Yet the most thorough precautions should be taken to prevent a possible visitation.

SUN-STROKES are knocking the unsuspecting and imprudent in New York, Louisville and all large cities. There's nothing like prudence in either hot, cold or rainy weather. He who violates any of nature's great laws, must suffer.

A SPECIAL from Washington to the Louisville Post, speaking of Swope's resignation, says: "The general feeling here is that if he resigned to be vindicated a la Conkling-Platt, by reappointment, he will wait some time for vindication. Nobody is yet mentioned for his successor, as no official announcement has yet been received here."

BISHOP PURCELL died at Ursuline Convent, Brown county, Ohio, Tuesday evening, at the 83rd year of his age. He was born in Marlow, Ireland, Feb 23 1800, and was educated in Paris, France, and was appointed Bishop of Cincinnati, in 1833. In 1869 he was made Archbishop. He was beloved through his community by all classes for his many excellent qualities.

The compulsory education bill passed by the Illinois legislature the last days of the session, requires the schooling of children from eight to ten years of age for not less than twelve weeks in each year, unless excused by the school directors or board of education of the proper county or city. Exceptions are made of children taught in private schools or physically incapable of confinement, or where no school is taught within two miles of such child or children. A fine of five to twenty dollars is imposed upon parents who refuse or neglect to comply with the law. Prosecutions occurring under this act must be instituted by board of education or school directors on their own volition, or upon request of any taxpayer residing in such district. Ignorance is the school of crime, debauchery and violence, and the only way to suppress it in the future will be to drive out ignorance by force. We would be glad to see Kentucky, and in fact, every State in the Union, fall into line with Illinois, and institute the compulsory educational law.

Pulpit Topics.

We are told, and the fact is universally admitted that the pulpit is an educator. Possibly the pulpit understands its own business, and needs no instruction from the secular press. Still the press is an educator, too, and educators ought to have quiet, pleasant talks together. The press and the pulpit ought to be on exceedingly good terms. Both seek the good of the people, and on most subjects may pull together. The press is opposed to the practice of carrying concealed weapons. It does not hesitate to denounce the practice. Why may not the pulpit to-day make it the subject for sermons? A great many good points might be made. The pulpit, like the press has got to get down to particulars. Generalizing won't do. Carrying concealed weapons ought to be universally denounced. Concealed weapons are too frequently in the churches. If the masculine worshippers could be examined and made to give up their pistols, etc., society would be horrified. Why not press against it, and pray for a sweeping reform? Pistols and bowie knives are too numerous. They do not evince an advance in civilization. On the contrary, they clearly demonstrate that savagery lingers in our midst. If the practice could be universally ostracized, society would be immensely the gainer. There would be fewer murders. The gals would have less work, and the penitentiary fewer convicts. There would be less mourning and fewer broken hearts. The criminal courts would have less employment, and the expense of trials which the people have to pay would be lighter. By all means, the pulpit might drift from the old beaten tracks, and in its teachings lay hold upon some of the particular sins which afflict society, and make to itself a great name. The press will aid in such undertakings, and everybody will be benefited by the good work.

[Vanceburg Courier.]
To Whom It May Concern.

As a report has been placed in circulation by the friends of G. T. Gould, at Millersburg, charging Prof. H. K. Taylor, of this place, with the authorship of an editorial that appeared in a recent issue of the Courier, under the caption of "A Beast in Broadsides," I deem it but justice to that gentleman to state that he was not at or near Vanceburg at the time the article was written or printed, and did not have any connection in any manner with the wording of said article, and he never at any time wrote or dictated any article of that character for the columns of the Courier. I wrote the article headed "A Beast in Broadsides," myself, as the foreman of the office, Mr. George Bowman, who was with me at the time of writing will testify, and I am ready and willing at any time to make myself responsible for the truths contained therein. The Courier is a paper of and for the people, and although some times, as the case may require, rough and bitter in its denunciation of wrong doers and hypocrites, and using words that burn and scar the guilty heads upon whom they fall, its editor is accountable to no one, save his Maker for the freedom of their use, and has no apology to make for their utterance. We are well aware that tyrants, law haters, seducers, debauchers, and all manner of roughs and despots who fall in the way of Courier, denounce it in unmeasured terms, but it has no favors to ask or patronage to solicit from any such creatures, or their apologists, aiders, abettors or friends. Such men know fear of the independent press; it is the only power that can dethrone the despot and drag the tyrant down to his proper level. It leads the grand army of civilization—a host besides which armies of Xerxes were but feeble insects of the molds. As one of three leaders, the Courier will go on denouncing wrong wherever found, whether in the bower of palace, the humble school or state college, and if Dr. Gould's friends wish to listen to a few more dulcet strains of character music, they can be accommodated at any time and in quantities that will prove satisfactory by giving us until Wednesday of each week in which to rosin our bow.

St. Louis, Mo. July 2, 1883.

Editor BOURBON NEWS:
 Dear Sir: I thank you for your kindly allusion to "Confederate Annals," and for a copy of your paper containing it. It will afford me pleasure to send the magazine regularly to you. I am not the supposed "J. W. C." formerly of Bourbon county, Ky., as you announce. I am a Kentuckian, but came out of what Governor Crittenden facetiously styles "the pennyroyal district"—being from Breckinridge and I from the adjoining county of Grayson. My clerical friends, the Rev. D. A. Beardsley, of your city, knows me. I am known to the Rev. Dr. Rutherford, formerly of St. Louis and to Dr. G. T. Gould, of Millersburg. In 1862 he and I passed through your city when it was occupied by some of Gen. Kirby Smith's "rebels." We had been refused a pass by the commanding officer at Lexington; then rode out of that city, through Paris and Millersburg and into "the United States" at Flemingsburg. We found it prudent to depart from that town "between two days" and the next day we found ourselves in "Dixie," at Mt. Sterling, where Gen. Humphrey Marshall was master of the situation and center of the day—ponography notes of whose oration before the multitude, I took and have preserved. At Lexington I saw Gen. Abe Buford senior in Scott county warriors by the Company. In Nelson county, near my home, when I returned, I found and saw much of Gen. Bragg's great Confederate army and was "mixed up" with it, for a day and a night in their retreat from Bardtown. I saw something of Scott's cavalry—very much of Morgan's bold riders, and saw as much, perhaps as any other citizen of the two armies in Kentucky in different parts of the State. I have twenty chapters of "Memories of the war in Kentucky" written, which will from time to time appear in the Confederate Annals, and will be of special interest to Kentuckians.

All of this letter comes from you having said I was formerly of Bourbon county.

Respectfully,
 J. W. CUNNINGHAM.
 Col. Waters of Dr. Gould.

Col. Frank Waters says Dr. Gould was right in firing the old darkey preacher out of the seat in the car. He says a man unattended by a lady only take a seat in the ladies' car by courtesy of the conductor, and there is a tacit understanding that he is to surrender his seat when there is any demand for it.

He says the old negro was evidently showing impoliteness to ladies, and thinks the unwritten law of this land which grants a knight errant's commission to every man who wants to redress a lady's grievances is a wholesome one, and that Dr. Gould was only acting by the authority of the highest sentiment of the land. He quotes the old man as saying that this city as authority on this point, and as having on one occasion acted similarly under similar circumstances.—Lex. Transcript.

We announce in this issue the candidacy of Capt. Jerro R. Morton, of Lexington, for the nomination for Judge of this Judicial district. Mr. Morton is an able lawyer and a clever gentleman, and in case we can't get our Bourbon candidate in, we would be pleased to see Capt. Morton win.

BILL McDOWELL, the negro ravisher, was taken from jail at Louisiana, Mo., by a mob and hanged. The body was taken to Louisiana, strung up again and photographed. It was then cut down and the head severed from the body.

ENGLAND finds that the plan of "assisting" paupers works both ways. We can "assist" them back as fast as they come. The abject-bodied immigrant, who is not lazy, we are glad to keep.

SUMMER resorts in this country will profit by the cholera scare in Europe, which bids fair to interfere seriously with foreign travel this season.

Every intelligent man, of both political parties, ought to begin to talk up the vote on Constitutional amendment.

Boyle's Revolving Barrel Churn.
 Boyle's Revolving Barrel Churn, without dash or paddle has accomplished a revolution in butter-making. It will make more butter out of the same amount of cream and a better quality with less labor than any other churn.

A boy can churn ten gallons of cream with ease. It is suspended on its journals, and, as it revolves, the cream falls from end to end, and the agitation being equal throughout the whole mass, the globules all separate at the same time and are preserved to a larger per cent. than by the old process. It follows that no half churned cream is left in the buttermilk, or to mix with the butter, which would give it a bad appearance, the dead cream would injure its keeping quality and decrease its value. The cream acts upon the inner round surface of the barrel, and the butter is made by concussion and not by friction. The head is easily removed, and being air tight, the atmosphere is excluded, thereby holding the cream at the proper temperature. I am the agent for this churn for the State of Kentucky, and any one wanting to buy a churn or country right can find me for the present at Thos. Phillips' meat store, my23-1m SHELBY LILLESTON.

In commendation of the Boyle Revolving Barrel Churn, the following well known gentlemen of Paris and Bourbon county, speak as follows:

It is easily worked and churns perfectly, bringing butter in twelve or fifteen minutes. It gathers perfectly and is easily cleaned.
 W. W. MASSIE.

I consider it superior to any other I have ever tried. It will make more butter and quicker, with less labor than any other churn.
 W. W. GILL.

Have used it three years; it is the best I ever used. It requires less labor in working and cleaning than any. Mine makes itself each year in the State of Kentucky.
 J. L. TRUNDLE.

It is easily worked, easily cleaned and works perfectly. I cheerfully recommend it to all needing a churn.

TAKE WARNING! HOT WEATHER!

IS DOWN UPON US WITH A SWOOP. SWELTERING HUMANITY consults the thermometer and the poor, perspiring mortal greets his prototype with the time-worn interrogation, "Hot enough for you?" and flendishly smiles to himself as he reflects that he has succeeded in making another unhappy victim to "Old Sol's" rays somewhat warmer and more uncomfortable.

NOW, THEREFORE, instead of consulting the thermometer, come once and interview US, and feel yourself a new man by donning some of our light, cool summer garments, and also REMEMBER THAT OUR LOW SCALE OF PRICES STILL HOLDS GOOD. OUR GREAT MARK-DOWN SALE STILL CONTINUES. The world revolves on its axis, and sensible, careful buyers come to headquarters for a good article at a low price.
